

Acerca del proyecto...

Harvard
Business
School

Boletín Informativo

CREATING EMERGENT MARKETS

Destacando a las Mujeres de Negocios

A composite image featuring a portrait of Beatriz Fernández on the left, smiling and wearing a white blouse. To her right is a circular logo for "CREPES & WAFFLES". To the right of the logo is a dark background section containing text about her.

BEATRIZ FERNÁNDEZ
COLOMBIA *Co-creadora y
propietaria, Crepes & Waffles*

Beatriz Fernández es la co-creadora y propietaria de Crepes & Waffles, una cadena de más de 180 restaurantes que llevó el concepto de “brunch” a Colombia. En su entrevista, revela su experiencia montando este emprendimiento y experimentando con recetas para crear un producto de alta calidad. Beatriz reflexiona sobre cómo ajustar un menú para satisfacer las preferencias siempre cambiantes de los consumidores mientras se mantiene una marca consistente y distintiva basada en sabores tradicionales colombianos. Describe también la campaña de sostenibilidad dirigida por su hijo, en la cual utilizan ingredientes locales y de temporada. Discute los principios detrás de su cultura corporativa que la han llevado a invertir en el desarrollo profesional y la salud de sus empleados. Concluye con una discusión del impacto social, de la importancia de la paz, y del papel de Crepes & Waffles ante los desastres naturales en su país.

Accede al transcripto completo aquí

Clips de vídeo

Empresas de familia

Beatriz Fernández discute los distintos papeles que sus hijos cumplen en la empresa de la familia y como ellos han contribuido al crecimiento de la compañía.

Igualdad de género

Beatriz Fernández describe los talleres de empoderamiento en la Academia de las Artes que se realizan con el propósito de apoyar a mujeres, especialmente de bajos ingresos.

Expansión Global

Beatriz Fernández explica su decisión de crecer con su negocio a nivel internacional en la década de 1990, yendo primero a Ecuador y luego al otro lado del Atlántico, mientras se focalizaban en sus relaciones con las comunidades y gustos locales, incorporando granjeros locales y haciendo que cada gerente de tienda sea un líder.

Publique en nuestra Revista Digital

Estamos lanzando una Revista Digital para promover la investigación basada en las entrevistas de nuestro archivo de historia oral. Invitamos a enviar un artículo original para nuestra publicación del verano septentrional de 2022. Los manuscritos en español (con traducción al inglés) de todas las disciplinas son bienvenidos, mientras los mismos realicen un uso sustancial de los materiales del proyecto Creando Mercados Emergentes como fuente primaria. Los envíos serán considerados hasta el miércoles 31 de junio. Por favor, enviar sus contribuciones originales por correo electrónico a cem@hbs.edu indicando en el asunto "Creating Emerging Markets Magazine Submission". En el cuerpo del correo, incluir su nombre completo, Institución a la cual se encuentra afiliado/a, ocupación (estudiante, profesor, investigador independiente), y la dirección de su correo electrónico. Próximamente publicaremos más información acerca de nuestra guía para envíos. Ante cualquier consulta o duda, por favor escribanos a mbinkercosen@hbs.edu.

Nuestro proyecto

El proyecto Creando Mercados Emergentes ofrece información exclusiva sobre la trayectoria de empresarios y líderes comunitarios de América Latina, África, Asia y el Medio Oriente durante las últimas décadas. Constituye un recurso importante para la investigación, la docencia y el interés general. En el sitio web pueden consultarse más de 150 entrevistas realizadas por profesores de la Universidad de Harvard o investigadores asociados con esta institución. En América Latina, los testimonios recogidos en Argentina, Brasil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Perú y México revelan desafíos, tensiones, contradicciones y logros de empresarios y empresarias referentes durante las últimas décadas y en la actualidad. En la mayoría de los casos, las entrevistas se han realizado en español (con su respectiva traducción al inglés). Las transcripciones son de acceso público y pueden descargarse de nuestro sitio web luego de completar un breve formulario. También puede consultarse nuestra colección de varios cientos de videos cortos (clips) que analizan un espectro de temas diversos, como la corrupción o la innovación, de interés por su valor para la docencia. Los clips pueden descargarse y utilizarse libremente.

CONÉCTESE CON NOSOTROS

Manténgase en contacto: Nos gustaría conocer sus opiniones sobre este proyecto, acerca de cómo se puede utilizar y mejorar, y qué otros países podrían incorporarse. Por favor escríbanos a cem@hbs.edu para sugerir candidatos y candidatas para nuestras entrevistas o compartir su experiencia con el uso de las mismas en la docencia, investigación o por su interés general.

Enlace a los profesores que codirigen el proyecto y a los coordinadores:

- Geoffrey Jones, Isidor Straus Profesor – HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL
- Tarun Khanna, Jorge Paulo Lemann Profesor – HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL
- Andrea Lluch, CONICET (Argentina) y Universidad de Los Andes (Colombia), Investigadora Independiente y Profesora
- Makena Binker Cosen, Investigadora Asociada – HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL

Harvard Business School,
Soldiers Field, Boston, MA 02163

Copyright © 2022 President & Fellows of Harvard College. All Rights Reserved.

If you do not wish to receive any further email from us, please unsubscribe.

About the project...

Newsletter

CREATING EMERGING MARKETS

Harvard
Business
School

New interview with first Nigerian Minister of Communication Technology

In her interview with the Creating Emerging Markets project, Dr. Omobola Johnson discusses her early upbringing and education, her consulting career at Arthur Anderson, her takeaways from her tenure as the first Nigerian Minister of Communication Technology under the presidency of Goodluck Jonathan, her experience in venture capital at TLCom Capital, and her role as the co-founder of WimBiz, a non-profit dedicated to empowering women.

VIEW FULL INTERVIEW HERE

Video clips

Developing local content

Omobola Johnson emphasizes the importance of local content development and ICT skill capacitation in response to the burgeoning tech industry in Nigeria.

"We have to have that local content mindset. It is not about protecting Nigeria, it is about ensuring that Nigerian entrepreneurs and companies can thrive."

Healthcare and technology

Omobola Johnson discusses the ways the Ebola crisis prepared Nigeria to confront the COVID-19 pandemic and healthcare challenges in access, quality, and safety that can be solved using technology.

"Health is one area where technology is going to play a major role to help us solve some of the really big challenges that we have in this country."

Empowering women in business

Omobola Johnson explains how WimBiz seeks to increase the representation of women on corporate boards, spotlighting one of her favorite initiatives, the WimBoard Executive Database.

"If we do not try to solve [the problem of gender inequality], nobody is going to solve it for us."

Watch more

Why venture capital >

Navigating crises >

The role of regulators >

Leading change >

WimBiz's origins >

About us

The Creating Emerging Markets project offers unique insights on business leadership over the last three decades in Africa, as well as Latin America, and the Middle East, and South Asia. It is a major resource for research, teaching, and general interest. There are now over 150 interviews by Harvard faculty with high-impact leaders in business and social enterprise. The interview transcripts are fully accessible and can be downloaded online at the website. There is also a collection of hundreds of short video clips that are frequently updated, on topics ranging from innovation and start-ups, business-government relations, and corruption. They are downloadable without permission.

Connect with us

Stay in touch: We would like to hear from you with thoughts on the project, how it can be used, how it can be improved, and which new countries for us to enter. Please contact cem@hbs.edu with potential interviewee nominations or share ways in which you have used our research.

Project Co-ordinators at Harvard Business School

Geoffrey Jones – Isidor Straus Professor of Business History

Tarun Khanna – Jorge Paulo Lemann Professor; Director, Lakshmi Mittal and Family South Asia Institute, Harvard University

Research Associate
Makena Binker Cosen

Harvard Business School,
Soldiers Field, Boston, MA 02163
Copyright © 2022 President & Fellows of Harvard College. All Rights Reserved.

If you do not wish to receive any further email from us, please unsubscribe.

About the project...

HARVARD | BUSINESS | SCHOOL
Creating Emerging Markets

NEWSLETTER

BOOK LAUNCH

Leadership to Last: How Great Leaders Leave Legacies Behind

Society tends to glorify the get-rich-quick entrepreneur—build a company and go public, then (maybe) give to charity. In their new book, Geoffrey Jones and Tarun Khanna interview iconic business leaders from India who have demonstrated leadership to last.”

The book shows how Indian magnates, including Ratan Tata, Adi Godrej, Kiran Mazumdar-Shaw, Rahul Bajaj, etc., have built, to general acclaim and acknowledgement, organizations that are seen as forward-looking and innovative, subscribe to a code of ethics and generally contribute to the betterment of society. The authors demonstrate that this trifecta is a lot harder to achieve than a unicorn status.

ORDER NOW

Video clip showcase

This book draws on a large set of in-depth interviews with business leaders across India and South Asia conducted by Harvard faculty as part of the Creating Emerging Markets project. Get a sneak peek at these interviews now!

CHAPTER ONE MANAGING FAMILIES

FEATURING
ADI GODREJ of

Godrej

CHAPTER TWO COMMITING TO VALUES

FEATURING
N.R. NARAYANA
MURTHY of

Infosys

CHAPTER THREE INNOVATING FOR IMPACT

FEATURING KIRAN
MAZUMDAR-SHAW of

Biocon

CHAPTER FOUR CONTESTING CORRUPTION

FEATURING
JERRY RAO of

VBHC

CHAPTER FIVE CHALLENGING GENDER STEREOTYPES

FEATURING
SHABANA AZMI

CHAPTER SIX PROMOTING INCLUSION

FEATURING
RATAN TATA OF

TATA

CHAPTER SEVEN CREATING VALUE RESPONSIBLY

FEATURING
ANU AGA OF

AGA

Meet the authors

Geoffrey Jones is the Isidor Straus Professor of Business History at the Harvard Business School. He obtained his PhD at the University of Cambridge in Britain. He has since taught widely in Europe and the US. He specializes in the history of global business and emerging markets, especially the ecological and social responsibility of business. His recent books include Beauty Imagined: A History of the Global Beauty Industry (2010), and Profits and Sustainability: A History of Green Entrepreneurship (2017). He is a fellow of the Academy of International Business and a Corresponding Fellow of the British Academy.

Tarun Khanna is the Jorge Paulo Lemann Professor at the Harvard Business School. He studies entrepreneurship as a means to social and economic development in emerging markets. He was the first director of Harvard's university-wide Lakshmi Mittal and Family South Asia Institute in the fall of 2010. The institute rapidly grew to engage over 150 faculty members from across Harvard in projects embracing pure sciences, social sciences and humanities, and spanning the region from Afghanistan to Myanmar. A centerpiece of the Institute's strategy is deep local presence, anchored through offices in New Delhi and Lahore. During the past decade, he has overseen HBS activities across South Asia, anchored in Mumbai.

About the project

The Creating Emerging Markets project offers unique insights on business leadership over the last three decades in South Asia, as well as Latin America, Africa, and the Middle East. It is a major resource for research, teaching, and general interest. There are now over 150 interviews by Harvard faculty with high-impact leaders in business and social enterprise. The interview transcripts are fully accessible and can be downloaded online at the website. There is also a collection of hundreds of short video clips that are frequently updated, on topics ranging from innovation and start-ups, business-government relations, and corruption. They are downloadable without permission.

Connect With Us

Stay in touch: We would like to hear from you with thoughts on the project, how it can be used, how it can be improved, and which new countries for us to enter. Please contact cem@hbs.edu with potential interviewee nominations or share ways in which you have used our research.

Project Co-ordinators at Harvard Business School

- Geoffrey Jones – Isidor Straus Professor of Business History
- Tarun Khanna – Jorge Paulo Lemann Professor; Director, Lakshmi Mittal and Family South Asia Institute, Harvard University

Research Associate

- Makena Binker Cosen

Harvard Business School,
Soldiers Field, Boston, MA 02163
Copyright © 2021 President & Fellows of Harvard College. All Rights Reserved.

If you do not wish to receive any further email from us, please unsubscribe.

Latin American Regional Newsletter, December 2021

PARA LA GENTE

El proyecto Creando Mercados Emergentes de la Escuela de Negocios de Harvard se mantuvo activo durante la pandemia y continúa entrevistando a líderes empresariales latinoamericanos de alto perfil. En nuestro boletín informativo más reciente, revelamos algunos de sus reflexiones sobre la responsabilidad y el impacto social de las corporaciones

Entrevistada: Rosario Bazán

PERÚ

CEO de DanPer (Envasado y Agricultura)

En su entrevista con el proyecto CEM, la Ing. Bazán discute la hiperinflación de los 1980 en Perú, y cómo su título de ingeniera industrial la ayudó a conseguir trabajo durante una época de gran desempleo, y luego impactó en su decisión de abrir un negocio de exportación de piñas junto a su pareja.

“En la medida que impactamos positivamente en la vida de nuestros trabajadores, ellos están impactando en la vida de sus familias, de sus comunidades, y por consiguiente en nuestro país.”

Durante la entrevista Rosario describe los primeros años de esa empresa, incluyendo sus experiencias con su socio holandés, el reto de capacitar a empleados, y satisfacer a clientes globales mientras operaba un mercado lleno de incertidumbres. Explica cómo su compromiso de honrar los acuerdos con sus clientes, a pesar del fracaso, le abrió la oportunidad de iniciar otra empresa. Este nuevo emprendimiento fue el origen de DanPer, ahora una de las principales empresas exportadoras de productos primarios del Perú, y reconocida por la calidad de sus productos, sus avances en sostenibilidad y por empoderar a sus empleados y comunidad local.

Rosario enfatiza la dificultad de obtener capital durante una crisis económica prolongada. Discute cómo la agitación social la motivó a crear oportunidades de empleo digno y a demostrarle al mundo de lo qué era capaz su país. Explica cómo logró estos objetivos diversificándose en otros cultivos y productos, al adaptar nuevas tecnologías e invirtiendo fuertemente en la creación de una cultura corporativa abierta e inclusiva.

“Para lograr la sostenibilidad de una empresa se requiere enfocarse también, además del balance económico, en el balance social... Ese clima saludable se va a dar solamente en la medida que tu respetes [al] trabajador.”

En este clip, la Ing. Bazán explica su decisión innovadora de iniciar un centro de salud dentro de su empresa y las razones por las que han podido aumentar significativamente la productividad de sus trabajadores.

Entrevistada: Sylvia Escobar

COLOMBIA

Presidente de Terpel (Combustibles y Gas) (2002 - 2021)

En su entrevista con el proyecto CEM, la Sra. Escobar describe su educación en el extranjero, su regreso a Colombia y su transición laboral entre el sector público y el privado. Nos cuenta la historia del grupo empresarial Terpel desde su fundación en 1968, relatando un largo proceso de consolidación iniciado en el 2001, su transición cultural hacia un enfoque centrado en las personas y su último cambio de dueño. Sylvia comparte sus estrategias para manejar una red de empresas independientes y destaca la presencia nacional como una de las mayores fortalezas de Terpel.

“Cuando las personas se vuelven el foco de lo que hacemos... la compañía empieza a crecer, porque empieza a crecer el objetivo que teníamos.”

Escobar luego describe el compromiso de Terpel con la sostenibilidad y la diversidad cultural de Colombia, valores que promueve mediante el desarrollo de un portafolio en sus tiendas con productos de baja toxicidad y representantes de cada región del país. Discute luego los desafíos de internacionalizar Terpel y de trabajar en una industria altamente regulada. Señala la importancia de la igualdad de género en la industria y la necesidad de contar con más mujeres en posiciones ejecutivas. Para concluir, analiza el rol de Terpel en el proceso de paz que terminó con la larga historia del conflicto civil de Colombia, iniciado a mediados de los 1960.

“El producto es una excusa para llegarles a las personas —es una ventaja competitiva no estar atada a un producto. Estoy atada a mi convicción y a mi compromiso con las personas.”

En este clip, la Sra. Escobar analiza el desafío de la desigualdad de ingresos en Colombia, el rol de la Fundación Terpel en demostrar que las empresas necesitan un propósito más allá de las ganancias, y por ello la apuesta a una gran inversión en la educación y en la formación de líderes comunitarios.

Videos sugeridos

Pedro Gómez
LOS DESASTRES NATURALES

Alberto Grimoldi
LA HIPERINFLACIÓN

José Alejandro Cortés
LA POBREZA

Nuestro proyecto

El proyecto Creando Mercados Emergentes ofrece información exclusiva sobre la trayectoria de empresarios y líderes comunitarios de América Latina, África, Asia y el Medio Oriente durante las últimas décadas. Constituye un recurso importante para la investigación, la docencia y el interés general. En el sitio web pueden consultarse más de 150 entrevistas realizadas por profesores de la Universidad de Harvard o investigadores asociados con esta institución. En América Latina, los testimonios recogidos en Argentina, Brasil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Perú y México revelan desafíos, tensiones, contradicciones y logros de empresarios y empresarias referentes durante las últimas décadas y en la actualidad.

En la mayoría de los casos, las entrevistas se han realizado en español (con su respectiva traducción al inglés). Las transcripciones son de acceso público y pueden descargarse de nuestro sitio web luego de completar un breve formulario. También puede consultarse nuestra colección de varios cientos de videos cortos (clips) que analizan un espectro de temas diversos, como la corrupción o la innovación, de interés por su valor para la docencia. Los clips pueden descargarse y utilizarse libremente.

Conéctese con nosotros

Manténgase en contacto: Nos gustaría conocer sus opiniones sobre este proyecto, cómo cree que puede utilizarse y mejorarse, y qué otros países podrían incorporarse. Por favor escríbanos a cem@hbs.edu para sugerir candidatos y candidatas para nuestras entrevistas o compartir su experiencia con el uso de las mismas en la docencia, investigación o por su interés general.

Enlace a los profesores que co-dirigen el proyecto y a los coordinadores:

- Geoffrey Jones, Isidor Straus Profesor – HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL
- Tarun Khanna, Jorge Paulo Lemann Profesor – HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL
- Andrea Lluch, CONICET (Argentina) y Universidad de Los Andes (Colombia), Investigadora Independiente y Profesora
- Makena Binker Cosen, Investigadora Asociada – HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL

Gráficos obtenidos de vecteezy.com.

Harvard Business School,
Soldiers Field, Boston, MA 02163
Copyright © 2021 President & Fellows of Harvard College. All Rights Reserved.

If you do not wish to receive any further email from us, please unsubscribe.

South Asian Regional Newsletter, November 2021

Business Voices on Inclusion in South Asia

Featured Interviewee: Devi Shetty

Dr. Devi Shetty is a cardiac surgeon and Founder and Chairman of Narayana

Health, the second largest hospital network in India. Since its founding in 2001, the cost of heart surgery at Narayana Health has fallen to being the lowest in the world. First focused on cardiology and cardiac surgery, the hospital network now offers all forms of tertiary care at over a dozen locations in India. Dr. Shetty initiated the “micro health insurance scheme” along with the government of Karnataka, which currently insures more than four million poor farmers in the state.

“We need to do two million heart surgeries a year - just in India. Currently, all the heart hospitals put together perform hardly 130,000 to 150,000 surgeries.”

In his interview for Creating Emerging Markets, Dr. Shetty describes the poor state of the Indian healthcare industry when he began his career, which he believes continues to be held back by the shortage of skilled workers.

“You can't produce [a healthcare workforce] overnight. It takes 14 years to train a surgeon to operate on your hand. Unless we create a methodology of using technology to train people, this world will be in big trouble.”

He explains how, in the 1980s and 1990s, more than two million people a year needed heart surgeries in India—and not just elderly retirees, but young heads of household who were relied upon to support their families. Dr. Shetty shares some of the innovative strategies he devised at Narayana Health to improve both care and access with very limited resources.

“India will prove to the world that the wealth of the nation has nothing to do with the quality of healthcare its citizens will enjoy.”

He then discusses how he raised money from a private equity company to support the hospital network's substantial growth. He concludes by reflecting on how intelligent policy can help developing countries around the world provide affordable healthcare to their citizens.

"We have never refused a single patient with a curable heart condition who had no money because they couldn't afford the surgery. It's not because of me. The ecosystem that we created makes it possible."

"Subsidizing Heart Operations"

In this segment, Dr. Shetty explains how Narayana Health has developed systems to ensure that even very poor patients get the care they need. Particularly, he describes how he seeks to incentivize families that are more willing to pay for operations for baby boys than baby girls to invest in girls' health, too.

Click here to watch the clip.

Featured Interviewee: Runa Khan

Runa Khan is Founder and Executive Director of Friendship, an NGO founded in 2002 that supports remote communities in Bangladesh. Friendship pioneered floating hospitals, provides integrated services for climate-impacted communities, and delivers educational services. Friendship has also been active in the Rohingya crisis when Myanmar military persecuted and forced large numbers of Muslims to flee to Bangladesh in 2017. It became the second largest healthcare service in refugee camps.

“The poor cannot afford poor solutions. You give them something that is beautiful. You give them art. You give them excellent healthcare. You give them the best education that you possibly can. Then they start having hope and that’s where the change can come in. People can live in poverty, but they cannot live without dignity and hope.”

In her interview for Creating Emerging Markets, Khan describes the privilege she had growing up as a descendent of Jamindars (wealthy landowners) and tells the story of what prompted her to step outside of her privileged elite lifestyle to address rural poverty. In 1995, she began to work with UNICEF in a scheme to train government schoolteachers in rural Bangladesh based on a novel pedagogy she had developed rooted in simplicity and ethics.

“I cannot imagine somebody coming to me and saying we need to do this, but it might have a gender problem. They will come to me saying we need to do this and this information will only be thought of IF it is based on our values. Values are not the limiting factor but the essence of why we do something.”

She describes this pedagogy in detail: how she came up with the pedagogy, and how she was able to implement it, as she was not a formally trained teacher. She argues that the success of Friendship rested on listening to the people, understanding what they needed, and creating a solution, instead of coming with a pre-planned project. Khan explains that the priority of Friendship is to bring services to char dwellers, who are among the poorest people in Bangladesh. The challenge for Khan was how to do this for a population of people who moved house nearly fifty times in their lifetimes, and about which so little was known that even their total numbers may have been anywhere between 4 and 10 million.

"No one would go there except to give relief and some ad hoc services. But that doesn't make change happen. Change happens only with dependability, quality, [and] confidence."

To conclude the interview, Khan explains how she has taken Friendship international for fundraising purposes, and the groundwork she has done in other countries including Pakistan.

"Building Educational Infrastructure"

In this segment, Khan discusses Friendship's innovative strategy for creating schools and training teachers in remote and rural areas.

Click here to watch the clip.

Clips Showcase

Muhammad Musa:
on financial inclusion

Ritu Kumar: on restoring traditional craftsmanship

Suresh Krishna:
on eradicating poverty

About

The Creating Emerging Markets project offers unique insights on business leadership over the last three decades in South Asia, as well as Latin America, Africa, and the Middle East. It is a major resource for research, teaching, and general interest. There are now nearly 140 interviews by Harvard faculty with high impact leaders in business and social enterprise. The interview transcripts are fully accessible and can be downloaded online at the website. There is also a collection of hundreds of short video clips that are frequently updated, on topics ranging from innovation and start-ups, business government relations, and corruption. They are downloadable without permission.

Connect With Us

Stay in touch: We would like to hear from you with thoughts on the project, how it can be used, how it can be improved, and which new countries for us to enter. Please contact cem@hbs.edu with potential interviewee nominations or share ways in which you have used our research.

- Project Coordinators at Harvard Business School
 - Geoffrey Jones – Isidor Straus Professor of Business History
 - Tarun Khanna – Jorge Paulo Lemann Professor; Director, Lakshmi Mittal and Family South Asia Institute, Harvard University
- Research Associate
 - Makena Binker Cosen

News from Harvard Business School's Creating Emerging Markets Project

ABOUT: The Creating Emerging Markets project offers unique insights on business leadership over the last three decades in Africa, as well as Latin America, the Middle East, and South Asia. Led by Harvard Business School Professors Geoffrey Jones and Tarun Khanna, the project serves as a major resource for research, teaching, and general interest. There are now nearly 150 interviews by Harvard faculty with high impact leaders in business and social enterprise. The interview transcripts are fully accessible and can be downloaded online at the website. There is also a collection of hundreds of short video clips that are frequently updated, on topics ranging from innovation and start-ups, business government relations, and corruption. They are downloadable without permission. For a curated selection of Creating Emerging Markets clips, please also see the Creating Emerging Markets playlist on the Harvard Business School's YouTube channel every Monday. As we pursue increasing awareness around inclusion, diversity and racial justice in Africa and around the world, we highlight three of our interviewees that speak directly to these themes.

Voices on Inclusion

Featured Interviewee:
Sizwe Nxasana

About Nxasana and the Interview

Sizwe Nxasana was the founding partner of SizweNtsalubaGobodo, the largest Black accounting firm in South Africa, as well as the former CEO of Telkom and FirstRand Group. In his interview for the Creating Emerging Markets project, Nxasana explains his decision to become an accountant and the many challenges he encountered as a Black professional in the apartheid state. Nxasana describes the ways in which his firm trained new accountants and expanded opportunities for Black students to enter the profession. As the interview continues, Nxasana discusses the transformation of the state-owned telecommunications company, Telkom, into a corporate entity that included Black people in executive roles and extended service to previously underserved centers of Black population. Nxasana details his efforts to simultaneously expand service and increase the efficiency of Telkom, while navigating a complicated and evolving governmental bureaucracy. Next, Nxasana describes his transition into the banking industry. He identifies the crucial role that bringing technology up to date played in his success at FirstRand, and the need to eliminate inefficiencies in staffing and structure just as he had at Telkom. As at Telkom, Nxasana recognized the need and saw an opportunity to expand into the previously underserved customer base of Black South Africans, and also began to develop an international presence. To conclude his interview, Nxasana discusses his work at the National Student Financial Aid Scheme and his long involvement with basic education as part of corporate social investment at Telkom and FirstRand.

Sizwe Nxasana, the founding partner of SizweNtsalubaGobodo, the largest Black accounting firm in South Africa, describes the actions he took to develop a corporate culture that empowered Black people at his accounting firm.

Featured Interviewee: Shirley Zinn

About Zinn and the interview

Shirley Zinn is Non-Executive Director of Sanlam and former Head of Human Resources for Standard Bank South Africa. Her interview for the Creating Emerging Markets project focuses on her personal journey from a childhood of poverty in apartheid-era South Africa to her position as a prominent business leader. She discusses her upbringing in the Cape Flats, which had been established under the Group Areas Act in 1950 to keep Black and Indian communities separate from white communities. After graduating from the University of the Western Cape, Zinn went back to the Cape Flats where she taught English to high school students and adult learners. It was here that she developed her own pedagogy involving participative and collaborative learning, which encouraged the students to return to class. Zinn then went on to get her doctorate at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. In this interview, she describes the challenges she faced in receiving permission from her job to take a temporary leave, and the tests she faced living in the United States. After graduating in 1997, Zinn went back to South Africa seeking to work in education on curriculum design, but ultimately took a job at an insurance company designing training programs for entry-level staff. In 1998, Zinn moved to Pretoria, briefly working in public service before becoming Head of Human Resources at the local affiliate of British-owned Reckitt Benckiser in 2000. After personal tragedy struck in 2003, Zinn left her role at Reckitt Benckiser and started Shirley Zinn Consulting. In 2004, Zinn became General Manager of Human Resources of the South African Revenue Services. The work was challenging as this organization was attempting to shift away from its apartheid-era culture, but Zinn believed that developing a system to collect taxes properly was essential in nation building. In the interview, Zinn discusses her more recent involvement in board governance. Zinn argues that it is important to ensure that a sustainable economy is built in South Africa through well-run businesses that are profitable, but have compassion for people and that it is important to call out businesses when they are not behaving accordingly. To conclude the interview, Zinn discusses her two high profile resignations as non-executive board member from Shoprite and Cricket South Africa that highlighted the issues of corruption in South Africa.

Shirley Zinn, the Non-Executive Director of Sanlam and former Head of Human Resources at Standard Bank South Africa, explains the hardships of growing up in Cape Town's Cape Flats in the 1960s, and the importance of possessing strong values and intent in the struggle to survive.

Featured Interviewee: James Mwangi

About Mwangi and the interview:

James Mwangi is CEO and Managing Director of Kenya's Equity Bank. In his interview with the Creating Emerging Markets project, he narrates his entrepreneurial journey building one of Kenya's biggest and most inclusive banks, and discusses his driving mission to give back to Kenyan society through education. Mwangi begins by describing the numerous obstacles—from compliance requirements to fees to access to liquidity—that barred many people from opening bank accounts at the start of his career in the early 1960s. Moreover, he explains how, after Kenyan independence in 1963, there were very few consumer-facing banks, because the government focused on developing banks aimed at serving state corporations, rather than the Kenyan population. Mwangi experienced the results of this exclusion at first hand during his childhood, when his mother—along with many other people in his village—was deemed ineligible to open a bank account. Mwangi's desire for equal access to banking services became a major motivating factor throughout his career. He goes on to explain the circumstances in which he got involved with Equity Bank, which was originally a building society. The bank was struggling, but he saw it as full of potential, and he led its transformation.

Today, Equity Bank is one of the biggest in Kenya, serving over 50 percent of the population. Mwangi focused on improving interactions with customers. Previously, he explains, clients “were made to feel that [their] value to the bank was based on [their] account balance.” At Equity, Mwangi strove to “give banking a human face.” As he explains in the interview, all customers—regardless of wealth or background—were treated with dignity. “People are more human than economic. That’s the conclusion I have today—that it’s how you treat them, it’s not what you give them that matters.” This relationship with clients—built on a foundation of mutual respect—was also key to helping previously disenfranchised Kenyans build savings accounts and credit history.

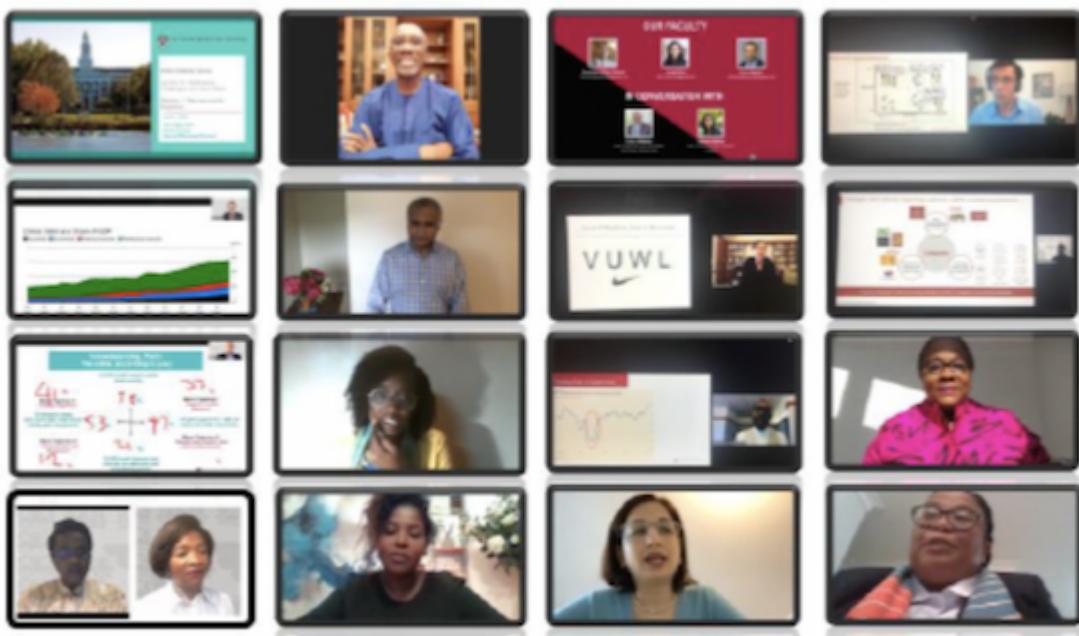

Mwangi explains that both international and state-owned banks failed to address the issue that 96 percent of the population had no bank accounts in post-colonial Kenya, and how Equity Bank under his leadership was able to dramatically expand financial inclusion.

Clips Showcase

The 2020 Africa Webinar Series

On June 4, 2020, the HBS Africa Research Center launched the webinar series, COVID-19: Reflections, Challenges and Next Steps, where HBS faculty shared insights on macroeconomics, strategy, leadership and execution relevant to Africa. This webinar series consisted of four sessions over four weeks, each featuring a pair of HBS faculty together with leading African business leaders sharing lessons relevant to the challenges being faced on the continent during this global pandemic. You can find recordings of the webinars by visiting the links below:

Faculty and guest speakers presenting in the four different sessions.

Session 1: Macroeconomic Scenarios

Session 2: Leadership in Uncertainty

Session 3: Strategy and Capital Markets

Session 4: Agile Execution

Connect With Us

Stay in touch: We would like to hear from you with thoughts on the project, how it can be used, how it can be improved, and which new countries for us to enter. Please contact cem@hbs.edu with potential interviewee nominations or share ways in which you have used our research.

- Geoffrey Jones – Isidor Straus Professor of Business History
- Tarun Khanna – Jorge Paulo Lemann Professor; Director, Lakshmi Mittal and Family South Asia Institute, Harvard University

Research Associate

- Morgan Spencer

Harvard Business School,
Soldiers Field, Boston, MA 02163
Copyright © 2020 President & Fellows of Harvard College. All Rights Reserved.

If you do not wish to receive any further email from us, please unsubscribe.

South Asian Regional Newsletter, October 2020

About

The Creating Emerging Markets project offers unique insights on business leadership over the last three decades in South Asia, as well as Latin America, Africa, and the Middle East. It is a major resource for research, teaching, and general interest. There are now nearly 150 interviews by Harvard faculty with high impact leaders in business and social enterprise. The interview transcripts are fully accessible and can be downloaded online at the website. There is also a collection of hundreds of short video clips that are frequently updated, on topics ranging from innovation and start-ups, business government relations, and corruption. They are downloadable without permission. For a curated selection of Creating Emerging Markets clips, please also see the Creating Emerging Markets playlist on the Harvard Business School's YouTube channel every Monday. As Covid-19 upends life in the region and worldwide, our theme for this newsletter is resilience. We highlight two of our interviewees which speak to this theme. We begin with a dramatic account of a family experiencing Partition.

Voice on Resilience

Featured Interviewee: Shamlu Dudeja

Shamlu Dudeja is Founder of SHE (Self Help Enterprise) India, a non-profit organization that focuses on reviving Kantha – the art of tradition embroidery found in the states of West Bengal and Odisha, as well as Bangladesh – as a means to provide rural women with access to income. Dudeja is also Chairperson of the Calcutta Foundation, an NGO supporting under-privileged communities in key areas including disaster relief, education support, medical support, and vocational support.

In her interview for Creating Emerging Markets, Dudeja narrates her inspiring story beginning with her family's dramatic flight from Karachi at the time of Partition, and their arrival in Mumbai in a storm and the belongings they had managed to take with them. As the interview continued, Dudeja talks of her early career as a mathematics teacher and how she became the author of a major math textbook. Resilient as ever, Dudeja used the royalties from this and subsequent publications to fund the operation of the non-profit organization SHE founded in the early 1990s. SHE grew from just a few women embroidering Kantha in their spare time to a complex network with trained seamstresses who oversaw hundreds of women workers. Dudeja also discusses SHE's unique organizational structure, how she ensures fair compensation, and how the group is adapting to the new ecosystem of online retail.

In this segment, Dudeja recounts her childhood during Partition in great detail, starting with the day of the Partition where she witnessed the Pakistani flag go up in Karachi, the subsequent looting in the city, her parent's decision to leave Pakistan, and her family's distressing journey by ship to Mumbai. Click here to watch the clip.

The photo above is Shamlu Dudeja and Professor Geoffrey Jones taken at her interview in Kolkata.

Featured Interviewee: Anu Aga

Anu Aga was the Chairperson of Thermax from 1996-2004, an engineering company providing sustainable solutions in energy and environment, and is the current Chairperson of Thermax Foundation, the CSR branch of Thermax. In 1966, Anu Aga's father, A S Bhathena founded a company which became Thermax in 1980. In 1985, Rohinton Aga (Anu Aga's husband) assumed the title of Chairperson and Managing. In 1985, Aga herself became involved with the family business after being appointed Head of Human Resources.

After the sudden death of her late husband in 1996, Aga inherited leadership of Thermax. In the interview she did for Creating Emerging Markets, Aga describes some of the biggest challenges she faced after assuming leadership of a large-scale, highly-diversified engineering firm during her eight-year tenure. During this time, the Indian economy was in the midst of a severe downturn, and despite the fact that she had little background in business or engineering, she recognized that the company was out of depth and needed major restructuring. Aga believes the key to her success was her willingness to ask for help, and her unprecedented decision to remove family members from executive positions. This was the first of many bold decisions discussed in her interview, including her insistence on a no-corruption policy at Thermax. After stepping down in 2004, Aga has remained active as Chairperson of Thermax Foundation, involved in widespread philanthropic activities including The Akanksha Foundation, an NGO delivering high quality education to children from low-income communities and Teach for India.

In this segment, Aga explains the circumstances around which she was chosen as her husband's successor at Thermax after he passed away in 1996. She discusses the many challenges she faced and how she was able to overcome them, noting the importance of accepting help and not comparing oneself to others. Click here to watch the clip.

The photo above is Anu Aga and Professor Geoffrey Jones taken at her interview in Mumbai.

Clips Showcase

Keshub Mahindra: on social impact

Binod Chaudhary: on social impact

Runa Khan: on education

diversification

Shyam Benegal: on gender

Rahul Bajaj: on family business

Devi Shetty: on fundraising

Suresh Krishna: on base of the pyramid

Zia Mody: on gender

Worldwide Week at Harvard 2020

Worldwide Week at Harvard showcased the remarkable breadth of Harvard's global engagement. Hosted by Harvard Schools, research centers, departments, and student organizations, this year's events focused on the themes of social justice and human rights, pandemics and global health, and governance and democratic leadership.

On 7-8 October 2020, "24 Hours of Harvard" (24hH) featured 24 consecutive hours of Harvard programming. During the One Harvard presentation, where the HBS India Research Center along with the HSPH India Research Center, Harvard Business Publishing, and the Lakshmi Mittal South Asia Institute presented "daastan – e – south asia (Tales of Leadership from South Asia)". This presentation focused on efforts to drive public health communication and policy translation, using case studies and research to influence management practice, and depicted individuals leading with passion and purpose to drive social justice, community health and digital access to education post Covid-19.

It used a visual storytelling medium to string together stories from frontline workers, leaders in business, academia, government, Harvard alumni, donors, and other stakeholders.

Meanwhile the Lakshmi Mittal and Family Institute for South Asian Studies presented “Khusrau’s River of Love: Cosmopolitanism and Inclusion in South Asian Traditions”. Throughout recent history, South Asia has witnessed a deep polarization of society fueled by ideologies that seek to exclude “the other.” However the region also had a rich legacy of inclusion and humanism, expressed through its vibrant literary and performative traditions, best exemplified by Amir Khusar, South Asia’s legendary historian, poet, musician, and mystic. This presentation featured performances by writer and musician, Ali Sethi and Dastango, journalist, and writer, Himanshu Bajpai, with commentary by Harvard Professor Ali Asani.

Connect With Us

Stay in touch: We would like to hear from you with thoughts on the project, how it can be used, how it can be improved, and which new countries for us to enter. Please contact cem@hbs.edu with potential interviewee nominations or share ways in which you have used our research.

- Project Co-ordinators at Harvard Business School
 - Geoffrey Jones – Isidor Straus Professor of Business History
 - Tarun Khanna – Jorge Paulo Lemann Professor; Director, Lakshmi Mittal and Family South Asia Institute, Harvard University
- Research Associate
 - Morgan Spencer

Harvard Business School,
Soldiers Field, Boston, MA 02163
Copyright © 2019 President & Fellows of Harvard College. All Rights Reserved.

If you do not wish to receive any further email from us, please unsubscribe.

Latin American Regional Newsletter, June 2019

Latin American Regional Newsletter, June 2019

Latin American Regional Newsletter, June 2019

SOBRE EL PROYECTO

El Proyecto Creating Emerging Markets ofrece información exclusiva sobre la trayectoria de empresarios y líderes sociales de América Latina, África, Asia y Medio Oriente durante las últimas décadas. Constituye un importante recurso para la investigación, la docencia y el interés general. En el sitio web pueden consultarse más de 130 entrevistas realizadas a referentes empresariales y a líderes sociales de alto impacto por profesores de la Universidad de Harvard, o investigadores asociados con esta institución. En América Latina, los testimonios recogidos en Argentina, Brasil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Perú y México revelan los desafíos, tensiones, contradicciones y logros de empresarios y empresarias referentes durante las últimas décadas y en la actualidad.

Excepto en unos pocos casos, las entrevistas se han realizado en castellano (con su respectiva traducción al inglés). Las transcripciones son de acceso público y pueden descargarse online en el sitio luego de completar un breve formulario. También puede consultarse una colección de cientos de breves videos que analizan diversos temas, desde la corrupción hasta la innovación, de especial interés para su uso docente. Los videos de las entrevistas latinoamericanas se encuentran en idioma español, con subtítulos en inglés. Se pueden descargar y utilizar libremente.

NUEVAS VOCES

Entrevistada: Susana Balbo, Argentina.

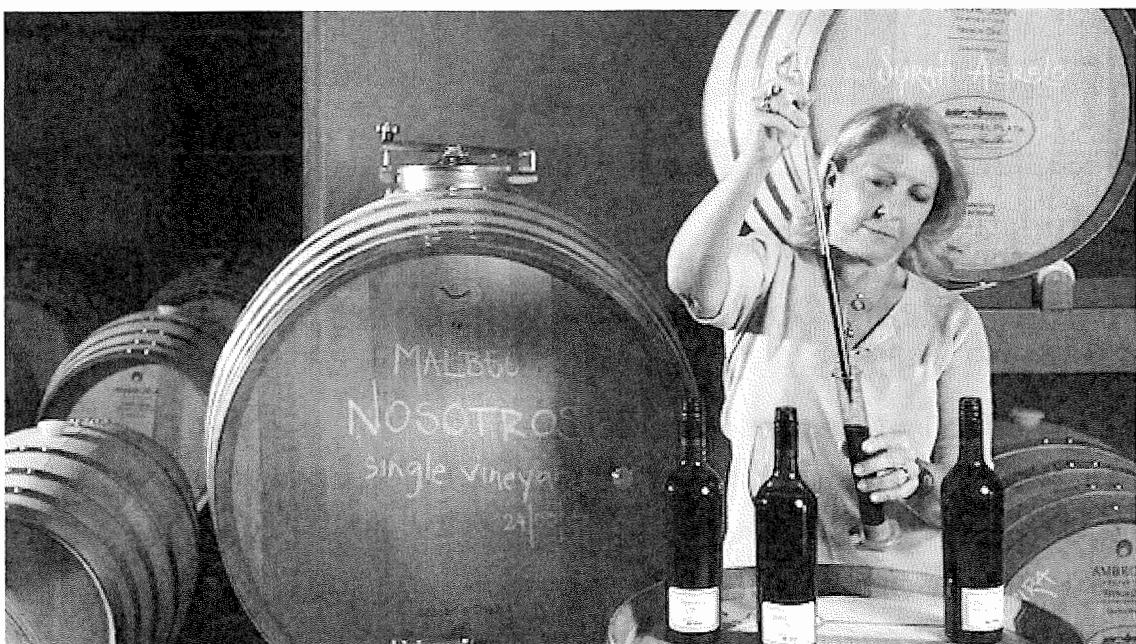

La empresaria argentina Susana Balbo es dueña y enóloga en jefe de Susana Balbo Wines. En su entrevista con CEM, comparte la historia de su destacada carrera. Describe su experiencia y los distintos pasos en su carrera que la posicionan como una de las productoras de vino más exitosas de su país. Susana Balbo cuenta los desafíos, las dificultades y los triunfos de su dinámica trayectoria empresarial y profesional. A continuación se presentan dos breves videos, con fragmentos seleccionados de la entrevista.

Vídeo 1 –Título: “Los inicios de una enóloga”

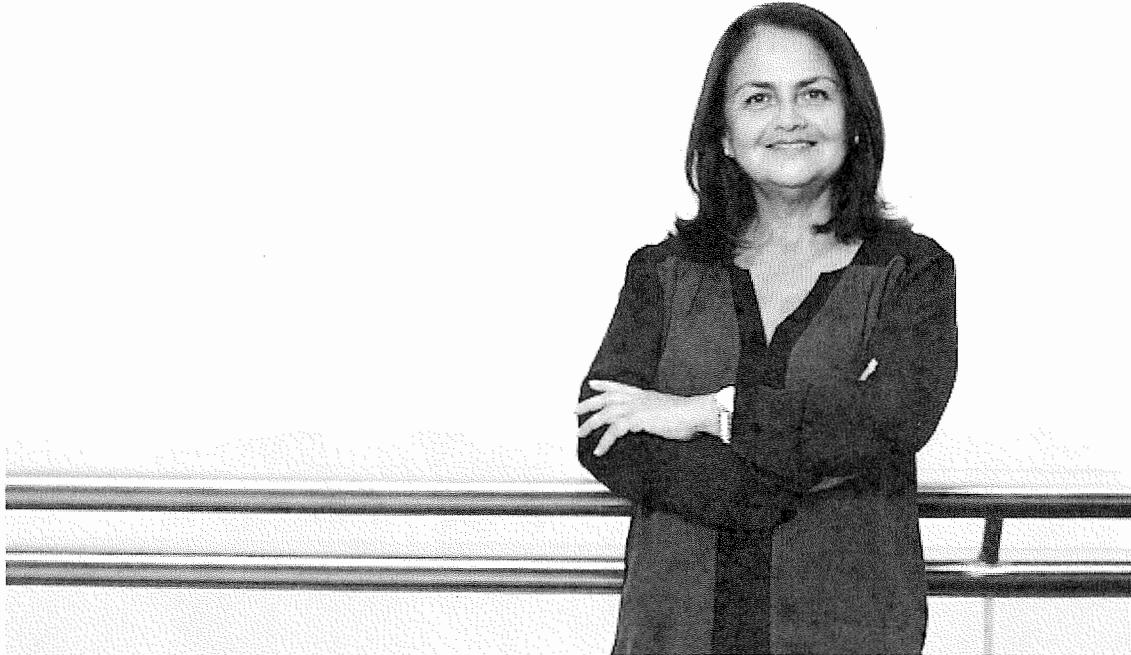

En este segmento, Susana Balbo habla de su experiencia y los desafíos que enfrentó como pionera en la industria vitivinícola argentina. Cuenta sus vivencias al ser la primera mujer que obtuvo un título universitario en enología y los retos que debió superar para conseguir trabajo en una disciplina inusual para las mujeres en esa época. También describe los difíciles momentos que atravesó como gerente para coordinar la mano de obra, en particular con las comunidades locales, donde las mujeres no solían ocupar posiciones de mando. Haga clic aquí para ver el video.

Vídeo 2 –Título: “Liderazgo empresarial y sostenibilidad ”

Susana Balbo analiza la importante función que pueden desempeñar los empresarios en el desarrollo económico, en especial en lo que se refiere a la sostenibilidad. Explica la importancia y la necesidad de formar líderes empresariales que se comprometan tanto con la formación del capital humano como con la protección del medio ambiente. Haga clic aquí para ver el video.

EN LAS NOTICIAS

Rosario Bazán: Co-fundadora y gerente general de Danper Trujillo S.A.C, Perú

EY (Ernst&Young) Emprendedora del Año en 2015, EY Jurado de Emprendedor del Año en 2016 - 2018. En esta entrevista, Rosario Bazán describe el complejo contexto de negocios del Perú durante la década de 1980 y el proceso de creación de Danper, hoy empresa agroindustrial líder. Relata los desafíos que enfrentó en los inicios de la compañía, desde una crisis económica e hiperinflación hasta la violencia y el terrorismo. Sin embargo, explica que la inestabilidad social no la desalentó –por el contrario, la motivó a seguir adelante. Asimismo, durante la charla se analizan cuestiones como la sostenibilidad, el empoderamiento de los empleados, la diversificación , la innovación y la responsabilidad social corporativa. Haga clic aquí para ver un segmento de la entrevista.

CONÉCTESE CON NOSOTROS

Manténgase en contacto: Nos gustaría conocer sus opiniones sobre este proyecto, acerca de cómo se puede utilizar y mejorar, y qué otros países podrían incorporarse. Por favor escríbanos a cem@hbs.edu para sugerir candidatos y candidatas para nuestras entrevistas o compartir su experiencia con el uso de las mismas en la docencia, investigación o por su interés general.

Enlace a los profesores que codirigen el proyecto y a los coordinadores:

- Geoffrey Jones, Isidor Straus Profesor – HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL
- Tarun Khanna, Jorge Paulo Lemann Profesor – HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL
- Andrea Lluch, CONICET (Argentina) y Universidad de Los Andes (Colombia), Investigadora Independiente y Profesora
- Morgan Spencer, Investigador Asociado – HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL

Harvard Business School,

Soldiers Field, Boston, MA 02163

Copyright © 2019 President & Fellows of Harvard College. All Rights Reserved.

If you do not wish to receive any further email from us, please unsubscribe.

African Regional Newsletter, December 2021

The role of government in business

Harvard Business School's Creating Emerging Markets project has remained active during the pandemic and continues to interview high-profile African business leaders. In our newest newsletter, we reveal some of their thoughts on government and business.

Featured Interviewee: Okechukwu Enelamah

Founder of African Capital Alliance (Financial Services)
Former Nigerian Minister of Industry, Trade, and Investment (2015-2019)

In his interview for the Creating Emerging Markets project, Mr. Enelamah describes his early career transition from medicine to finance, his education abroad at the Harvard Business School, and his return to Africa and, then, to Nigeria to launch his work in private equity. He explains the challenges of establishing private equity in Nigeria and reveals how he overcame barriers, including issues around selecting the appropriate entrepreneurs to back, selecting the right partners, and fundraising. He notes his view that the 2010s proved turbulent for his industry because of multiple factors including market cycles, currency devaluations, and financial hedging issues. To conclude, Enelamah discusses what Africa can learn from China's growth, how Africa may be able to benefit from globalization, and the strong influence of his religious values on his career.

"It's our responsibility as Africans, and I include those of us that are in public service, in private sector, to create the right enabling environment for success."

In this clip, Mr. Enelamah reflects on his service as the Nigerian Minister of Industry, Trade, and Investment between 2015 and 2019 during the Presidency of Muhammadu Buhari, highlighting the importance of creating the correct environment to encourage the development of economies throughout Africa.

Featured Interviewee: Cas Coovadia

CEO of Business Unity South Africa (Policy)
Managing Director of the Banking Association of South Africa (Banking)

In this interview, Mr. Coovadia discusses his experience growing up under the apartheid regime as an ethnic Indian, his anti-apartheid activism throughout the 1980s, and his decision to go into business. He describes his role in forming Community Bank, South Africa's first mutual bank, and how he became the managing director of the Banking Association of South Africa. Coovadia expresses his views on the 2007-2009 global financial crisis, inequality, and corruption under President Zuma's 2009-2018 tenure. He details his latest venture, explaining the role of the Business Unity South Africa in advocating for an appropriate macroeconomic environment for growth, development, and investment in the country. To conclude, Coovadia discusses the need to include more women on boards, the necessity of the Broad-Based Black Economic Empowerment program, and the importance of the transformation of South African society as a whole.

"You can't compartmentalize business and government and society and so on. The world has gotten to a space where the success of business, sound governance, and success of society—the ordinary people—are totally interlinked."

In this clip, Mr. Coovadia argues that the government needs proactive policies to support the Black community because of the discrimination it experienced under apartheid.

Clip showcase

Savannah Maziya
ON POST-APARTHEID

Hakeem Belo-Osagie
ON MANAGING GOVERNMENT

Mo Ibrahim
ON CORRUPTION

About us

The Creating Emerging Markets project offers unique insights on business leadership over the last three decades in Africa, as well as Latin America, and the Middle East, and South Asia. It is a major resource for research, teaching, and general interest. There are now over 150 interviews by Harvard faculty with high-impact leaders in business and social enterprise. The interview transcripts are fully accessible and can be downloaded online at the website. There is also a collection of hundreds of short video clips that are frequently updated, on topics ranging from innovation and start-ups, business-government relations, and corruption. They are downloadable without permission.

Connect with us

Stay in touch: We would like to hear from you with thoughts on the project, how it can be used, how it can be improved, and which new countries for us to enter. Please contact cem@hbs.edu with potential interviewee nominations or share ways in which you have used our research.

Project Co-ordinators at Harvard Business School

- Geoffrey Jones – Isidor Straus Professor of Business History
- Tarun Khanna – Jorge Paulo Lemann Professor; Director, Lakshmi Mittal and Family South Asia Institute, Harvard University

Research Associate

- Makena Binker Cosen

